

Grandparents Raising Grandchildren: The Relationship Between Social Networks and Resilience

Request for Participants

Who is conducting this study?

A researcher from the Department of Human Development and Family Studies at Colorado State University is recruiting participants for a study to look at grandparent caregivers' social support.

What is the study about?

The study will look at how social support can help with the challenges grandparents raising grandchildren face.

Who can join this study?

You can participate in this study if you are a grandparent raising a grandchild and have had full responsibility for your grandchild for at least 1 year.

Why should I join this study?

By taking part in this study the information you share can help gain a better understanding of what types of social support and services are most beneficial to grandparents raising grandchildren.

What will I be asked to do?

- If you choose to take part in this study you will be asked to complete a 15-20-minute survey.
- At a later date some randomly selected participants will be invited to participate in a 30 minute interview at a time and location convenient for the participant.
- All participants will be entered in a drawing for a chance to win one of four $50 gift cards.
